Introduction

Study Development

Dr. James E. Fletcher was contracted by WRT Design to develop and conduct an on-site survey of recreation users at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area (FSLRA) including Lake Natoma and a random digit dial telephone survey of 400 adult residents in the primary market area for FLSRA.

On-Site Survey

During April and early May 2003, Dr. Fletcher worked with Kevin Harper of WRT Design and Jim Micheaels, State Park Planner for the Gold Field District, to develop a draft questionnaire for the on-site survey. Many of the questions were designed to replicate data collected by Dr. Fletcher in the statewide survey of Californians being completed for the Planning Department of the California Department of Parks and Recreation. This permitted data collected at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area to be compared with data collected for the entire state. After review and discussion by WRT personnel and Folsom Lake SRA representatives, Dr. Fletcher revised the on-site questionnaire to incorporate recommended changes, then finalized the questionnaire and sent it to WRT Design for copying (see Appendix A).

On May 18, 2003, Dr. Fletcher met with Jim Micheaels, Park Planner, and Scott Nakaji, Chief Ranger for the Gold Fields District, to develop a preliminary sampling schedule for the May data collection period. The schedule was reviewed by Jim Micheaels and revised by Dr. Fletcher per Mr. Micheaels' suggestions. Dr. Fletcher also toured each of the recreation areas to be surveyed with Jim Micheaels.

From May 22 through May 28, self-administered questionnaires were distributed to recreation users in the recreation areas at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area including Lake Natoma. A total of 547 completed questionnaires was returned by recreation users during this one week survey period.

In late June, Dr. Fletcher consulted with Kevin Harper and Jim Micheaels to develop a second survey schedule for the week of July 4th. During the period from July 3 through July 9, self-administered questionnaires were again distributed to recreation users in the recreation areas at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area including Lake Natoma. A total of 490 completed questionnaires was returned by on-site recreation users during this survey period.

The late season survey period was conducted from September 24th through September 30th. Recreation use at the sites was much lower than during the May and July data collection periods. A total of 272 completed questionnaires were collected during this period. Table 1 summarizes the number of completed questionnaires by park area for the three data collection periods.

Telephone Survey

The primary market area for a recreation site is generally defined as the area from which 70-75% of its visitors will originate. A review of zip code data from the on-site survey revealed that more than 70% of the recreation users surveyed at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area originated in Sacramento, El Dorado, and Placer counties. Based on this data, Dr. Fletcher, WRT Design, and Jim Micheaels agreed that the telephone survey should be conducted in these three counties.

During September and October 2003, Dr. Fletcher worked with Kevin Harper and Jim Micheaels to design, revise and finalize the telephone questionnaire. The telephone questionnaire was designed to replicate many of the questions included in the on-site survey. This made possible a comparison of the characteristics and opinions of on-site users with those of primary market area residents. The telephone questionnaire segmented respondents into three groups:

- 1) Those who have not participated in water-based recreation in the five years prior to the survey;
- 2) Those who have participated in water-based recreation during the past five years but have never visited Folsom Lake State Recreation Area; and,
- 3) Those who have participated in water-based recreation during the past five years and have visited Folsom Lake State Recreation Area.

The telephone questionnaire (Appendix B) was designed to ask relevant sets of questions of each group.

- Telephone survey respondents in the first group only answered the initial screening questions about outdoor recreation participation and the demographic questions so that they could be compared with members of the other two groups.

- The second group answered the initial screening questions about outdoor recreation, questions about their favorite water-based recreation area and the water area where they most often participate, a series of questions regarding possible barriers to visiting Folsom Lake State Recreation Area, questions about outdoor recreation participation during the past 12 months, and demographic questions.
- The third group (those who had visited Folsom Lake State Recreation Area) answered the initial screener questions, questions about their favorite water-based recreation area and the water area where they most often participate, questions about their visits to Folsom Lake State Recreation Area, opinions about the adequacy of facilities and services at FLSRA, questions about outdoor recreation participation during the past 12 months, and demographic questions.

A random sample of telephone numbers for Sacramento, El Dorado and Placer counties was purchased from Survey Sampling, Inc. of Fairfield, Connecticut. Data collection was begun on November 1, 2003 and completed on January 15, 2004. During that period, a total of 1,456 telephone numbers were called up to seven (7) times each in attempts to make contact with eligible survey respondents. Calling times included daytime hours during weekdays, evening hours during weekdays, daytime hours on weekends, and evening hours on weekends. As shown in Table 2, 36.1% (525) of the telephone numbers contacted during the survey period had eligible respondents (adults age 18 and over who spoke English). Of those 525 eligibles reached, 400 completed interviews, a cooperation rate of 76.2%. Cooperation rate was computed by dividing the number of completed interviews (400) by the total number of eligible respondents (525).

The following is a discussion of findings from both the on-site and the telephone surveys. Comparisons of findings have been included for those questions that were asked on both surveys.

Findings

Demographics of the Sample

Respondents to the on-site and the telephone surveys were asked several demographic questions. These included gender, highest level of education completed, birth year, racial or ethnic background, annual household income, home zip code, and group composition. The following is a summary of the demographic characteristics of the 1,308 on-site survey respondents.

- Of the 976 survey respondents who reported their gender, 49.7% were male and 50.3% were female (Table 3).
- A total of 53.2% held a bachelor's degree or higher (Table 4).
- Birth years ranged from 1909 to 1986 with 1961 as the median (middle) birth year for the entire sample of recreation users (Table 5).
- About three-fourths (74.8%) of the recreation users who reported their ethnicity said they were white. Asians (7.0%) were the second largest ethnic group (Table 6).
- The median annual household income range reported by recreation users was $75,000 - $99,999 (Table 7).
- As shown in the table in Appendix C, most (87.3%) of the recreation users surveyed at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area gave a home zip code with 95 as the first two digits. Another 7.2% gave a 94 zip code, and 1.8% gave an out-of-state zip code. The remaining 3.7% gave zip codes with 90, 91, 92 or 93 as the first two digits.
- Most (80.8%) of the recreation users said they were recreating with friends and/or family, and 8.4% said they were with an organized group (Table 8). Some recreation users listed more than one group type. This question was not asked on the September questionnaire.

The following is a summary of the demographic characteristics of the 400 telephone survey respondents.

- Of the 400, 37.1% were male and 62.9% were female (Table 3).
- A total of 43.2% held a bachelor's degree or higher (Table 4).

Outdoor Recreation Participation by Phone Respondents

Persons who responded to the telephone survey were asked three questions regarding outdoor recreation. First, they were asked how important public outdoor recreation areas and facilities are to them and their families. This was further explained as recreation areas and facilities managed by any government agency – city, county, state and federal. A total of 54.5% said public areas and facilities are very important and 26.5% said they are somewhat important. This is statistically identical to the opinions expressed in the statewide survey of Californians conducted for the California Department of Parks and Recreation in 2003 (Chart 1).

Telephone survey respondents were asked if they spend more time, about the same amount of time or less time in outdoor recreation activities now than they did five years ago. As shown in Chart 2, 26.8% said they spend more time, 29.6% spend about the same amount of time, and 43.6% said they spend less time. When compared with the statistics from the statewide survey conducted in 2003 for the California Department of Parks and Recreation, a significantly larger percentage of adults living in the Folsom Lake State Recreation Area are spending less time outdoors today than five years ago when compared with California as a whole (Chart 2). A crosstabulation of the amount of time spent outdoors by two age groups (those born before 1950 and those born in 1950 or later) revealed that members of the older age group were significantly more likely to say they were spending less time outdoors. Those respondents born in 1950 or later were significantly more likely to say they were spending more time outdoors than they were five years ago (Table 11).

When telephone survey respondents living in the primary market area for Folsom Lake State Recreation Area were asked if they participated in outdoor recreation on or near water (such as a lake, reservoir or river) during the past five years, 261 (65.4%) said “yes” and 138 (34.6%) said “no”. Those who said “yes” were asked to name the water area where they most often participate in outdoor recreation on or near water. As shown in Table 12, Folsom Lake, the American River, and Lake Tahoe were the three most frequently cited.

Telephone survey respondents were also asked the name of their favorite lake, river or other water area where they most often participate in outdoor recreation on or near water. As shown in Table 13, Lake Tahoe, Folsom Lake and the American River were the three that were most frequently mentioned.

Recreation Use

Visited Folsom Lake SRA

Telephone survey respondents who said they had participated in outdoor recreation on or near water during the past five years (n = 261) were asked if they had ever visited Folsom Lake State Recreation Area including Lake Natoma. A total of 208 (80.3%) of those who had participated in outdoor recreation on or near water said "yes". This represents 52.0% of the 400 telephone survey respondents, and 79.7% of those who said they had participated in outdoor recreation on or near water during the past five years.

Phone survey respondents were asked if they had visited Folsom Lake State Recreation Area during the past 12 months. Of the 208 who had visited the area some time in the past, 70 (33.7%) had not visited during the 12 months prior to the survey. Thus, 138 or 34.5% of the telephone survey respondents indicated they had visited one or more areas at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area including Lake Natoma during the year prior to the survey.

Number of Visits to FLSRA

On-site recreation users were asked how many visits to Folsom Lake State Recreation Area they had made during the past 12 months including the visit they were making when surveyed. As shown in Table 14, about half (50.7%) said they had made eight or fewer visits, and 19.5% said the visit they were making when surveyed was their first visit during the past 12 months. The mean (average) number of visits per year was 26.57.

Phone survey respondents were asked how many visits they had made to Folsom Lake State Recreation Area during the past 12 months. For those who said they had gone during the past 12 months (n = 138), the number of visits ranged from 1 to 365 with about 80% having made 8 or fewer visits (Table 15). The mean (average) number of visits was 16.3. Based on this finding, recreation users interviewed during the on-site survey make a significantly larger number of annual visits to FLSRA than telephone survey respondents.

Months of Visits

When on-site recreation users were asked which months they had visited Folsom Lake State Recreation Area during the past 12 months (Q2), a majority listed May through September with May and July as the two months with the highest percentage of reported recreation use (Table 16 and Chart 3). Use patterns by telephone survey respondents were similar to on-site users during June, July and August, but significantly lower during the other nine months (Table 16 and Chart 3).

Typical Length of Stay

On-site recreation users and telephone survey respondents were asked about how many days and hours they stay at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area during a typical visit. A total of 78.3% (1,025) of the on-site recreation users and 97.6% (203) of the phone survey respondents said they stay less than 24 hours. Table 18 presents data on the number of hours that day users typically stay. Of those on-site recreation users who stay a day or longer, 55.5% stay one day, 16.5% stay two days, 11.9% stay three days, and 16.1% stay four or more days.

Participation in Recreation Activities

Telephone survey respondents who had participated in water-based outdoor recreation during the past five years ($n = 261$) were asked to indicate how many days they had participated in each of 37 recreation activities. As shown in Table 19, recreation participation patterns were very similar to those found for Californians in the Statewide Outdoor Recreation Survey conducted for the California Department of Parks and Recreation during 2003. However, there were several notable differences. The following activities showed higher participation rates for Californians in the statewide survey than those for respondents to the Folsom Lake State Recreation Area phone survey:

- Visiting historic or cultural sites, museums
- Attending outdoor cultural events
- Beach activities, surf play
- Trail hiking

Conversely, two activities showed higher participation rates by Folsom Lake State Recreation Area phone survey respondents than were reported by Californians in the statewide survey:

- Freshwater fishing
- Motor boating

On-site recreation users were asked to indicate how many days they participated in each of 37 recreation activities at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area during the past 12 months. As shown in Table 20, the activities with the highest percentage of recreation users participating were swimming (49.9%), picnicking in developed sites (43.2%), beach activities (40.9%), walking for fitness and fun (40.0%), bicycling on paved surfaces (33.2%), and driving for pleasure (30.0%).

The average (mean) number of days of participation for each recreation activity was computed based on the number of days reported by on-site recreation users. The top six activities were jogging and fitness running (30.14 days), walking a pet (23.23 days), bicycling on paved surfaces (23.01 days), horseback riding and related activities (20.33 days), walking for fitness and fun (20.04 days), and wildlife viewing (18.44 days).

Most Important Activities

On-site recreation users were asked to select and rank order the five recreation activities that were most important to them during their visits to Folsom Lake State Recreation Area. As shown in Table 21, the five activities that were ranked as most important by the largest percentage of recreation users were (1) bicycling on paved surfaces; (2) whitewater rafting, kayaking, or canoeing; (3) walking for fitness and fun; (4) swimming; and, (5) motor boating.

The five importance rankings for each recreation activity were assigned a weighting score of 5 for a ranking of most important down to a score of 1 for a ranking of fifth most important. These weighting scores were multiplied by the number of recreation users who gave each of the five importance rankings for each recreation activity. These scores were then added together to provide a composite ranking score for each recreation activity. Table 22 presents the composite ranking scores and the ranking for each recreation activity based on this composite score. The five most important activities, based on their composite scores, were (1) swimming, (2) bicycling on paved surfaces, (3) beach activities, (4) walking for fitness and fun, and (5) picnicking in developed sites.

Participation in outdoor recreation activities during the past 12 months by Californians who participated in the California Department of Parks and Recreation statewide mail survey (2002) (n = 610) and Folsom Lake State Recreation Area telephone survey respondents (2003) who reported participating in recreation on or near water during the past five years (n = 261).

Barriers to Visiting FLSRA

Telephone survey respondents who participated in water-based outdoor recreation activities during the past five years but had not visited Folsom Lake State Recreation Area (n = 50) were presented 22 possible barriers for not having visited. Respondents were asked to what degree they agreed or disagreed with each possible barrier. The level of agreement/disagreement was scaled from 1 = strongly disagree to 4 = strongly agree.

Many of the respondents did not express opinions on some barriers, particularly those that pertained to facilities and services at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area. As shown in Table 23, only two of the barriers were rated an average of 3 (moderately agree) or higher by a majority of the 50 respondents:

- I don't know anything about the facilities or the lake (3.33).
- I prefer to go some other place to recreate (3.20).

Based on this finding, the only action that FLSRA could take to possibly increase recreation visitation by residents of the primary market area would be to provide information that would make area residents aware of facilities and the lake.

Opinions Regarding Recreation Activities and Facilities at FLSRA

More Opportunities for Activities

On-site recreation users were asked to select and rank order the five recreation activities that they would have probably done more often or would like to have tried if good opportunities, facilities and programs had been available to them at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area. The five importance rankings for each recreation activity were given a weighting score of 5 for a ranking of most important down to 1 for a ranking of fifth most important. These weighting scores were multiplied by the number of recreation users who gave each of the five importance rankings for each recreation activity. These scores were then added together to provide a composite ranking score for each recreation activity. Table 24 presents the composite ranking scores and the ranking for each recreation activity based on this composite score. The five most important activities in which on-site recreation users would have liked to participate more often were (1) swimming; (2) whitewater rafting, kayaking or canoeing; (3) attending outdoor cultural events; (4) bicycling on paved surfaces; and, (5) camping in developed sites with facilities. These top five recreation activities had the highest composite ranking scores of the 37 activities included on the questionnaire.

Recreation Areas Visited

On-site recreation users were asked which park areas they had visited or were planning to visit for the stay during which they were interviewed. As shown in Table 25, the park areas for which the highest percentage of planned visits were: (1) Beal's Point (26.4%); (2) Granite Bay (18.3%); (3) Negro Bar (16.8%); (4) Folsom Point (15.6%); and (5) Brown's Ravine/Folsom Lake Marina (13.5%). This pattern of planned visits by on-site recreation users is very consistent with the actual visitation patterns reported in Table 17 and Chart 4 for telephone survey respondents.

Ratings for Facilities and Services

On-site recreation users were asked to rate the adequacy of 27 recreation facilities and services at Folsom Lake State Recreation area utilizing a scale from very adequate (4) to very inadequate (1). As shown in Table 26, a total of 8 of the 27 items received average (mean) adequacy ratings of less than 3 (below somewhat adequate). The percentage of recreation users who provided ratings for each item is also shown in this table. The items with average ratings of less than 3 are highlighted in Table 26 and include the following:

- Number of shower facilities at campgrounds
- Number of education/interpretive programs
- Number of fish cleaning stations
- Screening between campsites
- Number of docks or temporary moorage
- Restroom maintenance
- Number of marinas
- Number of campsites with RV hookups

When the telephone survey respondents who had visited Folsom Lake State Recreation Area (n = 208) were asked to rate 21 of the items included in the on-site survey, two items received average ratings of less than 3 (Table 26a).

- Number of campsites with RV hookups
- Number of shower facilities at campgrounds
